

ROOSEVELT'S MEN ON VIEW.

First Parade of the Reform Police, with Mayor Strong and His Commissioners as the Proud and Contented Critics.

CHEERS FOR ACQUITTED DEVERY.

Schmittberger Also Applauded, and from the Battery to the End of the Route the Public Absolved Lexow Revelations. Bicycle Corps a Notable Feature.

THE reformed police turned out on parade yesterday afternoon, and thousands of persons along the line of march were unable to discover any reason for supposing that a reformed policeman was not as soldierly and stout a man as the old-fashioned sort with the ever-ready club and the side door trot. It was 12:30 p. m. when the first of the force began to assemble at the Battery, from which the parade was to start. Thenceforward until 2 p. m. there was all manner of crowding and pushing among the great masses of people who tried to see the new police. The formation was carried out in a systematic manner that spoke well for the discipline of the force. Indeed, the assembling and starting of a procession are the tests of good discipline.

The various bodies of police were in their appointed places early and there was no delay. Half a dozen mounted officers regulated traffic in the lower streets while the formation was going on, and the desperate attempts of truckmen and Broadway cable car gripmen to break through the lines were prevented with little fuss. Two or three minutes before the hands on the big clock of the Produce Exchange pointed to 2 o'clock the order was given to march.

CHEERS WERE ON TIME.

The head of the column swung out of the Battery Park into Whitehall street, and the rear followed around through State street. The crowds in Broadway broke into cheers as the procession appeared, and the small boy of the race humped himself and ran into every place where he ought not to be.

Meanwhile the crowd of spectators was assembling in upper Broadway. As early as 2 o'clock some women took up positions between Fourteenth and Twenty-third streets, and maintained them patiently until the police had passed. At the Worth monument and on the opposite side of Fifth avenue the stands used at the Decoration Day parade had been left and were crowded before 3 o'clock. Captain Theron S. Copeland, of the Thirtieth Precinct, with 200 policemen, had charge of these stands, and his position was no insecure. There is no form of "pull" known to mortal man that was not used yesterday to try to get admission to the reviewing stand on the west side of the avenue without a ticket. The pulls were failures.

At 3:45 Mayor Strong and Commissioner Roosevelt drove up in an open carriage, accompanied by a clerk carrying the Mayor's flag. They were received with applause and at once took their places at the reviewing point, where they were joined by Commissioners Grant and Andrews, General Horace Porter, Robert Macay, president of the Board of Education, and Street Commissioner Waring. Meanwhile the procession had moved up Broadway to Twenty-third street, where it turned into Madison avenue and went up to Forty-first street. There its route was across to Fifth avenue, down past the reviewing stand to Fifth street, where it dispersed.

Promptly at 4 o'clock the advance guard of one mounted roundsman and six mounted patrolmen passed the reviewing stand. They were followed by the new bicycle corps in excellent alignment. These new police, who have already a bright record, were received with hearty applause. Immediately behind them rode Chief of Police Peter Conlin. No marshal of France passing in review before Napoleon ever looked as proud as he did, nor sat up so straight.

PLAUDITS FOR DEVERY.

At the right of the line of his staff was Captain Killian, who was recently acquitted so quickly, and he received almost as much applause as the Chief. The commanding officer rode out after passing the stand, and took a position near the rear of the parade. His staff backed into the crowd south of the line, and disappointed a lot of people who thought they had gone to see the parade.

The infantry force of the procession was formed in five battalions of ten companies each, with two patrol wagons following each battalion. The marching of the men was generally good. The Tenth company of the Third Battalion, commanded by Captain Martens, showed the best form in passing the reviewing stand; but some other company may have done better in general. Captain Max Schmittberger, commanding the Tenth company of the Second Battalion, was heartily applauded as he passed, but the reception of the day was that accorded to Captain W. B. Devery. There was a storm of cheers as he passed the stands, and men threw their hats into the air and yelled while a party of young women in the east stand pounded shingles together and made an ear-splitting racket. Evidently the crowd of spectators was made up of people who had no sympathy with investigations into the doings of police captains.

Commissioner Roosevelt, it was noticed, saved his warmest applause for Inspector McCullagh. After the close conference which Mayor Strong, the Police Commissioners and Commissioner Waring held before the parade, the crowd wondered whether Inspector McCullagh was slated for some new and mysterious office.

The mounted police, under Sergeant W. A. Revell, brought up the rear of the procession on their handsome and finely groomed bay horses that brought exclamations of admiration from every spectator. The whole procession occupied just fifteen minutes in passing. The chief, his staff, and the commanding officers of battalions and companies wore white helmets. The men in the ranks wore their familiar drab head gear, but with gold stripes, blue coats and brass buttons, flags and military formation the force made a fine showing. The following is the complete order of the formation:

SINGLE TAXERS ARRESTED.

Two Prominent Members of New York Clubs Seized While Speaking in Dover, Del.

The Single Tax advocates of New York are so indignant because of the arrest of two of their speakers in Dover, Delaware, Saturday night, that they will raise money to have legal talent test the right of the authorities to interfere with open air street meetings.

The Single Taxers arrested were G. F. Stephens, a terra-cotta manufacturer, who has an office at No. 151 Broadway, and William Horan, connected with the Single Tax clubs here, who has been speaking in different parts of Delaware for several months.

According to information received at the headquarters of the Single Tax clubs, No. 111 Broadway, Stephens and Horan were arrested for no other offence than speaking on the street, although it is said that Salvation Army services and political meetings are conducted nightly in the same way without interference. Horan was sentenced to pay a fine of $10 or go to jail for thirty days, and Stephens was sentenced to go to jail for twenty days. Magistrate Cooper imposed the sentences, and Mayor Fisher, of Dover, is said to have been the prime mover against the Single Taxers.

Stephens is one of the best known advocates of the Single Tax, and is a man of considerable means. One of the men who have spoken at meetings where he appeared was the Rev. Dr. McGlynn. The bitter feeling against the Single Tax men, and especially against orators from New York, is explained by the fact that New York Single Tax men are back of the movement to capture the Delaware Legislature.

Bolton Hall, one of the Single Tax leaders, said yesterday, that the arrest of Stephens was undoubtedly due to spite.

"That the meeting was orderly," he said, "is evident from the fact that when the arrest was made the policeman said the charge was that of speaking in the street. It was afterwards found that that was no offence, so the complaint was changed to noisy disorderly conduct. The trouble is that the politicians have discovered that the Single Tax men are going to win.

"The feeling against New York and New Yorkers is due to the fact that much of the money for the campaign and many of the speakers are sent from this city. Congressman Tom Johnson contributed $500 through the New York Single Tax Club, and the other day, for conducting the work in Delaware, and other parties raised $500 at the same time.

There will probably be a stiff legal fight over the arrests.

MORE GARDEN THEATRES.

Grand Opera House Converts its Foyer into a Conservatory, and Crowds Seek the Roofs.

The roof gardens were well patronized last night, although the weather was not warm enough to keep people away from ground floor entertainments. The American, Madison Square, Casino and Proctor's had attractive vaudeville bills.

The Grand Opera House presented a pretty picture with the immense foyer transformed into a garden fitted with tables and chairs. Huge palms, vines and plants were arranged in roof garden style, and between acts of the "Chimes of Normandy," many of the audience strolled about the place or sought refreshments in the garden. The Carleton Opera Company gave a meritorious performance of the pretty opera. Rena Atkinson, a prima donna new to this city, was pleasing to the eye and ear. She is pretty and has an excellent voice. She was ably supported by other members of the company.

"Der Vogelhandler," which under the name of "The Tyrolean" served to give Marie Tempest part of her fame, was sung at the Terrace Garden. The familiar airs were well sung and thoroughly appreciated by the large audience.

Donnelly and Glard appeared at Koster & Bial's in a sketch which served to display their ability as mirthmakers. They are well known for their "Rainmakers" and "Natural Gas" plays, and many of their specialties were introduced in the sketch given last night.

Fregoli selected another from his large stock of plays for Olympic patrons. His wonderful ability in changing costume and voice to impersonate various people was tested to the utmost. The edoloscope showed several new pictures of scenes familiar to me of the audience.

ONLY PLAYING BURGLAR.

Still, as Gaillard is Found on a Roof, Armed to the Teeth, He is Held for the Grand Jury.

While suffering from temporary insanity, occasioned by worrying over the fact that he was out of employment, Edwin White Gaillard, of No. 200 West Eighty-eighth street, played at being a burglar in the early hours of yesterday morning, and in consequence is in jail, held in $2,000 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

He was caught by Policeman Sullivan, of the West One Hundredth Street Station, on the roof of a house, on West Eighty-eighth street. He had a pistol, hatchet and ladder in his possession, and a silk rope ladder twenty feet in length was found nearby. When arrested he pointed the pistol at the policeman and threatened to shoot.

Until one week ago Gaillard was employed by the Mica Roofing Company in Maiden lane, and travelled all over the country, receiving and filling large orders. He was dropped from the roll because the department was not making money. He lived with his mother and four brothers in a pretentious flat.

According to the story, which he told in the Harlem Police Court, he bet $5 with a friend that he could get to the roof of any house on Eighty-eighth street, between Columbus and Amsterdam avenues, at any hour of the night and gain an entrance into any house.

At midnight of Sunday he started to win the wager. He entered a flat house on the Columbus avenue corner, and by means of the rope ladder got to the roofs of the smaller houses adjoining.

Manager Childs, of the Mica Company, says Gaillard is absolutely honest.

OUT OF R. H. MACY & CO.

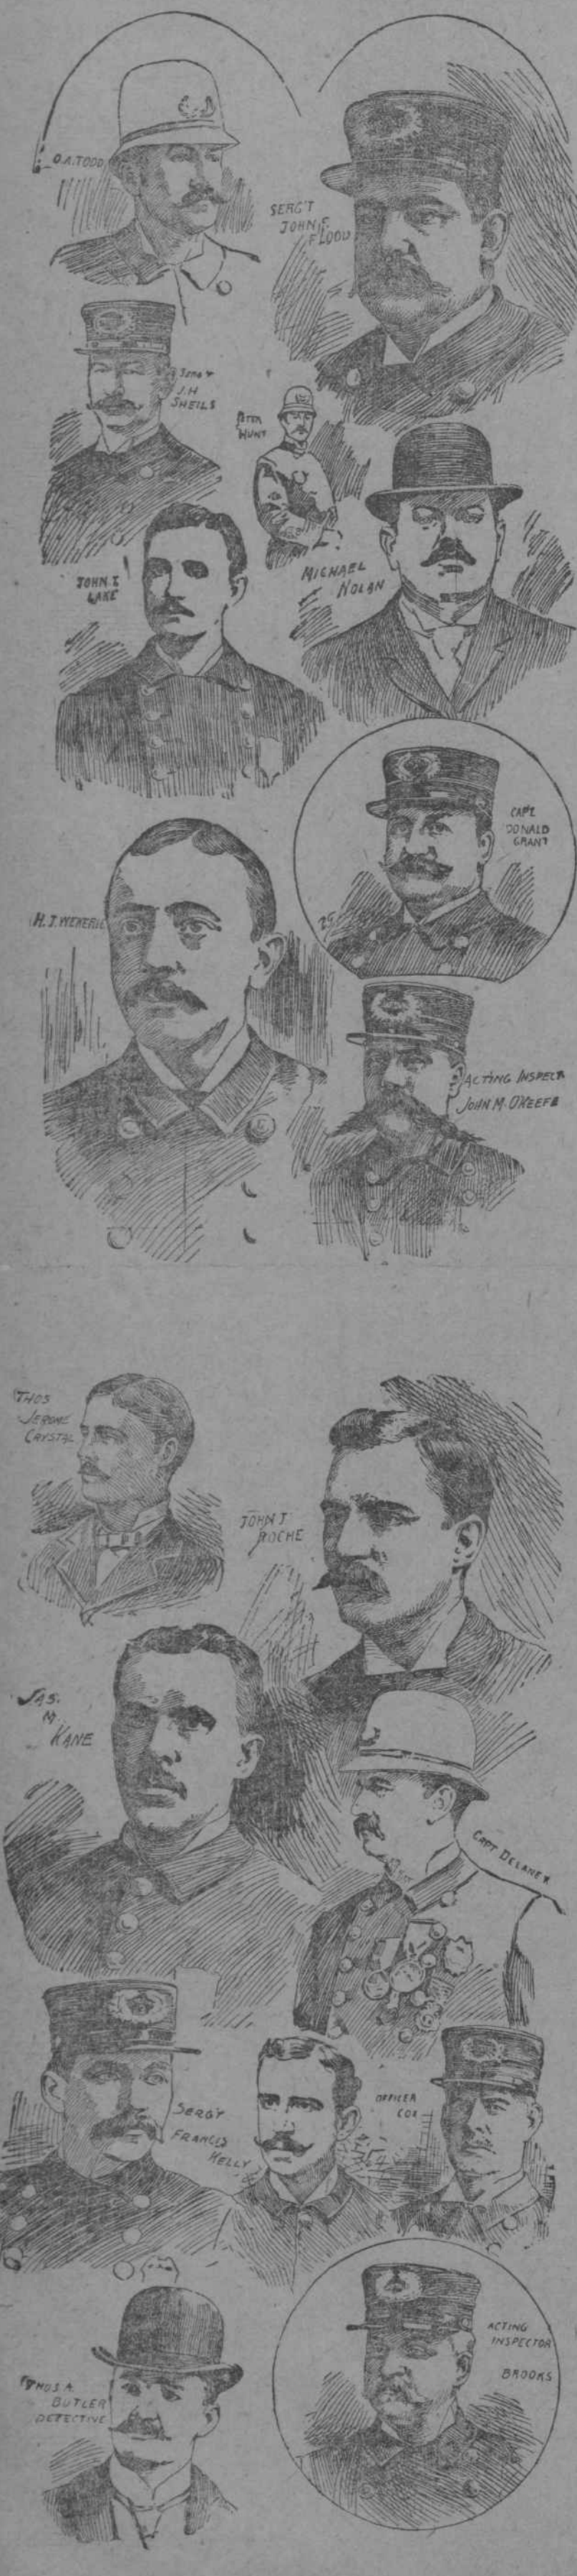

Health Compels Charles B. Webster to Give Up Business.

Charles B. Webster retired yesterday from the firm of R. H. Macy & Co., Sixth avenue and Fourteenth street, having been connected with the firm for twenty years. The only reason for his retirement is ill-health.

The other members of the firm, Messrs. Isidor and Nathan Straus, will continue the business. Their relations with Mr. Webster have been of a cordial character, and they separate on the most friendly terms. Mr. Webster's retirement will not cause any change in the firm's affairs.

Some of These Are "Honor Men."

These Two Are on "Roosies" Good List.
